

Call for Proposals – Harriman Russian Studies Research Grant

The Harriman Institute at Columbia University invites proposals for new faculty and Ph.D. student research projects in the social sciences involving the study of Russia.

The Harriman Russian Studies Research Grant competition is open to all tenured or tenure-track professors, Core Lecturers, and current Ph.D. students (ABD) at Columbia's various schools and departments. Russia-related experience is not a prerequisite, and proposals could span across the social sciences broadly defined, including comparative case research. Successful applicants will receive a $5,000 - $7,500 research allowance. These funds may be used to fund research travel, fund surveys, purchase research materials, and hire research assistants and/or translators. Book preparation workshops may also be considered for funding. Research proposals that develop new connections and/or partnerships with scholars and institutions in Russia are especially welcome.

Eligibility

Tenured or tenure-track faculty, Core Lecturers, and current Ph.D. students (working with a faculty member) in any discipline at Columbia University are eligible to apply.

Submission

Please submit your proposal, budget, and a full CV to Ryan Kreider, Assistant Director of the Harriman Institute (rk2780@columbia.edu) on or before October 16, 2017. Awards will be announced by November 15, 2017 and all sponsored research activities must be completed by October 1, 2018.

Award

Successful applicants will receive a $5,000 - $7,500 research allowance to be used for their projects.

Terms of Award

Successful research projects and their products (research papers, op-eds, and blog posts) will be featured on the Harriman Institute website, acknowledging the support of Carnegie Corporation of New York.
