

Yuri Shevchuk is the Senior Lecturer of Ukrainian at the Department of Slavic Languages and the Harriman Institute of Columbia University in the City of New York. He holds a Ph.D. in Germanic Philology from Kyiv State University (1987), and MA in Political Science from the New School for Social Research (1996). In 1990-2012 he taught Ukrainian at Harvard University Summer School. He also teaches Ukrainian at Yale and Cornell. In addition to Ukrainian, he teaches courses in Ukrainian, Soviet and post-Soviet Film as well as Slavic Cultures. He has published in the US, Canadian, and Ukrainian press and on the Internet on issues of Ukrainian language, identity, culture, Ukrainian and world cinema. He authored Beginner's Ukrainian with Interactive Online Workbook, Hippocrene Books, 2011, 2013, 2016, a popular textbook for university students and self-learners worldwide. Its third expanded, updated and integrated edition came out in August 2022. His latest publication is “Cinematographic Depopulation as a Variety of Cultural Imperialism,” 2022. He has lectured on Ukrainian film, language, and culture at leading US, Canadian, English, Italian, Spanish, Polish, and Ukrainian universities. Dr. Shevchuk is a leading Ukrainian lexicographer. His book the Ukrainian-English Collocation Dictionary, Hippocrene Books, New York, N.Y., 2021, 1,000 pages, has no precedents in Slavic or English lexicography.