

Klavdia Smola is Professor and Chair of Slavic Literatures and Cultures at the Department of Slavic Studies, University of Dresden. She is a cultural scholar and philologist interested in the intersections of literature, art, politics, and cultural history in Eastern Europe and beyond. Her research focuses on the cultures of the Soviet underground, Russophone (post-)Soviet literatures, Jewish literature and culture in Eastern Europe, as well as contemporary political art in Russia.