

Konstantin Mitroshenkov is a graduate student in the Department of Slavic Languages at Columbia University. His research interests include Soviet intellectual history, Marxist literary theory, and theories of historical narrative. He is currently writing a dissertation on spatial dynamics and social imagination in the prose of Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, Vasilii Grossman, and Lidiia Ginzburg.