

Victoria Buyanovskaya is Visiting Assistant Professor of Russian at Dickinson College. Originally from Moscow, she received her BA and MA from the Higher School of Economics and her PhD in Slavic from the University of Wisconsin–Madison. Her first book project examines the literary and political imagination of the so-called Third Revolution—grassroots democratic alternatives to early Soviet centralism—bringing Russian and Ukrainian literature into dialogue with working-class and peasant political theory and writing and with Marxist and anarchist thought. Her second project grows from her interest in care and mutual aid and explores the cultural imaginaries and ambivalent legacies of Soviet social welfare.
