

Zachary Murphy King (he/him) is Assistant Professor at the Department of Translation and Interpretation at Bilkent University in Ankara. His academic interests are centered on Russian and anglophone modernism, Marxist aesthetics, and literary translation. His first book examines the Soviet reception and translation of key figures of Western modernist writing, particularly Marcel Proust, John Dos Passos and James Joyce, the overlooked centrality of these writers in the debates over socialist realism, as well as the resonance of Soviet critiques today. Dr. King is also a literary translator of prose and poetry from Russian, German and Polish.
